October 2014

When: 7 p.m., Oct. 15
Where: Oakstone Academy
900 Club Dr., Westerville
Speaker: Roger Dyer
Topic: Franklin Mint

October presentation

In the 1960s and '70s you couldn't open a magazine or newspaper without finding an ad for Franklin Mint's beautiful medals. While they were expensive at the time, the rise in the price of silver made them good investments for awhile. Roger Dyer, who worked at the Franklin Mint during its heyday will give us a look inside the workings of the massive medal machine and answer questions at the end.

Roger Dyer says, "I thought I would talk about the days when the Franklin Mint was "the world's largest and foremost private mint." It will be an insider's tour and comments on the marketing, art development and production of commemorative medals, foreign coin of the realm and other silver collectibles during the years 1972-1976.

"I plan on spending some time fielding questions about events at Franklin Center, Pa., 40 years ago."

September presentation

John Roberts, the guy who wrote the book on the 1878-CC Morgan dollar, discussed the coin at our September meeting.

With an estimated 200,000 mint state survivors, the 1878-CC is the most common uncirculated Carson City dollar. He said the western mint struck 2.2 million coins from 21 die marriages, including a couple die-remarriages that are discernable by die state.

He noted, "There is no such thing as a 'CC' punch. It's a 'C' punch." The "Cs" are not level with each other and are at different elevations. The first "C" punch causes the metal to be "work hardened," altering how the second "C" appears.
